

The Inner and Outer of Evolutionary Leadership

With Tenneson Woolf and Kinde Nebeker

Many of us intuitively know that heroic, solo leadership is no longer enough. No one person can do what is needed. Many of us know that the world and its institutions are evolving — through disruption, through confusion, and through hope.

Leadership today (we define leaders as anyone who wants to help) requires attention to both the inner and the outer: the inner of personal presence and grounding, and the outer of collaborative process and collective intelligence.

For 20+ years now, Kinde and Tenneson have been refining their crafts to formulate and practice this kind of leadership. Tenneson comes from the fields of organizational leadership and systems design. He currently hosts leadership trainings, designs large conferences, and consults in strategic planning. Kinde comes from a background of design, transpersonal psychology, and ecopsychology. She currently guides wilderness rites of passage and mentors people in their psycho-spiritual development.

At this evening dialogue we will:

- ▶ Share Frameworks that Integrate Inner and Outer
- ▶ Engage Key Questions
- ▶ Identify Steps to Practice Immediately

When: Thursday, October 29, 2015
RSVP by October 23rd Appreciated

Where: Wasatch Retreat Center
75 South 200 East, Salt Lake City, UT

Time: 7:00 p.m. - 9:00 p.m

Cost: $10-20 (to cover meeting space)

More Information:
tenneson@tennesonwoolf.com
kinde@newmoonritesofpassage.com