Circle Immersion (20 minutes)
– Quanita Roberson and I explore a few notions on circle, community, and why we are hosting a five day immersion in December.

Living the Between

I recently co-hosted a workshop and retreat for 17 people. We had three days together, a closing retreat for a cohort program. I know that this group is very committed to doing their jobs well. It's impressive. Some of our materials and processes were explicitly focussed on just that. However, I knew that we also needed a narrative that invites more than that. The above diagram is what I drew for them. Highlighting the importance of the humanness that goes with doing a job well, and, the job-doing that goes with humaning well. This is the kind of intersection that I love. It doesn't deny the shared purpose of a job well done. It just expands the imagination of that purpose, welcoming in some a more expansive why.

Here's to each of us, finding more conscious ways to live the between.
