

TENNESON WOOLF

CONSULTING

Leadership Facilitation | Coaching | Reflection & Writing

Read

Resources that help to bring clarity, courage and aliveness, and that combine three of my passions – Poetry, Coaching, Group Process Facilitation

Human to Human Blog Posts

Listen

Conversations that help to bring story and sense-making. Was glad to welcome recent episodes with Chris Corrigan, one of my oldest facilitation buddies, and Dr. Myriam Hadnes, founder of Making Workshops Work.

Human to Human Podcast

Get Coaching

Guidance that helps design and discover effective participative formats in organizations and communities.

tenneson@tennesonwoolf.com

Balancing

Most of us wish a bit more balance in our lives, inner and outer. In our jobs. In our communities. In our families. Stacking and balancing stones is one of my favorite relaxing things to do on a beach, which I got to do recently during an afternoon of rest near Rorvig, Denmark.

I was on a trip for a Community of Practice Celebration. It was five days with 35 people celebrating an era of potent friendships and networks that began in the mid 1990s, when I was learning my trade with Margaret Wheatley and The Berkana Institute.

In the work that I continue to love most, I so often find that leaders are wishing to reclaim skills and practices that integrate inner balance with outer endeavors and experiments. Whenever it is time for you in such skills and practices, I'm glad to explore.

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Tenneson Woolf".