It's common — people in organizations and communities everywhere are too often frustrated with complexity, pressured with urgency, and stuck in confusion. We lose touch with our life-giving passions and gifts that are so needed and that we so want to contribute. This workshop is intended to help restore an orientation and way of being with gifts and passions.

In the best of worlds, gifts and passions guide choices. They help us reclaim the best of what can offer to a problem or to a dream. Gifts and passions help us discern where we organize time and energy. Gifts and passions helps us to grow healthy community (and teams, and families, and organizations).

Jump in to this workshop. I'll hold space for our connection and learning. I'll bring format and an exercise themed on gifts and passions, that you might carry with you to try in your places of learning.

I'll show up with my pedagogical excitement, my passion for learning community, and with my participative way of being. You show up with your open, curious learning, ready to evolve your ways of facilitating.

About Tenneson

Let's here (www.tennesonwoolf.com) about my poetry, my coaching, and my facilitation practices. I'm a rather intuitive person when I'm at my best, creating ways to bring learning and insight to folks that want to do good work and be good humans together doing that good work.

About Pop-Up Workshops & Why I'm Offering Them — To Evolve Facilitation Practice To Something Better

Hi. I'm Tenneson

Among other things, I'm a rather hungry learner in my craft that is facilitating groups to more wise, kind, helpful, and life-giving experiences. Perhaps you relate.

Pop-Up Workshops are my way of bringing some of that real-time learning to others — particularly group-process people or team leaders or managers or humans — that need insights and stuff to try as they evolve how people go well together.

Pop-Up Workshops are 90 minutes on Zoom, faces and participation required. Held in English. Cost is a sliding scale of your choice — $55, $75, or $35 USD.

Each workshop includes

- a little bit of welcome and hello (context and check-in)
- a little bit of an exercise (or game) on the topic
- a little bit of harvesting (noticing insights and applications)
- a little bit of goodbye (deliberate check-out)

I think the world needs more simple, more purposeful now. Less performance. More presence. I hear people craving it. I crave it. And I hear people hurting with its absence. True for me too.

Please join as inspired. Please share as inspired.
